

Garry Oak Meadow Species at Woodstock

Sudworth's Trees of the Pacific Slope noted the oaks of Fairhaven in 1908.

(Note: The text in the image is partially obscured and difficult to read, but the title is clearly visible.)

The "Snake Oak" in winter
31' down, 14' up.

Several species of the old Chuckanut landscape persist outside the Woodstock fencelines, remnants of a mosaic of hillside burns, balds, and woods that covered the mountain's warmer, drier west- and south-facing slopes and ledges.